

TEE-DEE WANT ADS ARE THE BEST SALESMEN. THEIR RESULTS PROVE IT.

The MAN ABOUT TOWN
(BY HARRY TUCKER.)

The thought comes up before us,
As we sit and think it over,
Of the fellow who would buy us,
When we think we are in clover;
How he slaps us on the shoulder;
Males us think we are a good one,
Until we grow some older;
Then we see he meant it in fun.

Take the fellow who has wrestling as a fad; it's a good thing; his intentions are not bad.

He knows a little bit,

But he really isn't it.

And no matter who wins out, he feels so glad.

He'll laugh and shout and howl, so full
of glee,

When he sees the wrestler go down on his knee.

But he doesn't know the meaning

Of the wrestler's side-way leaning;

And the throw down is a throw down;

huh! get!

No one can hear them speak as they are gasping;

They make a pretty showing;

Speak a word or two that's knowing,

While the crowd shouts out until its throat is rasping.

Having returned from the high brush around the Casino, we are once more on deck, with some sleep coming to us,
after spending nights of unrest and wakefulness
trying to get up a wrestling match by which, in the goodness of our heart, will fix it so the wrestlers get all.

We hope to be able to sleep a little next marching day, but if we don't get the sleep we shall try to get on the police force, so we won't have to sleep.
That reminds us of those beautiful lines:

Sleep, sleep, is good for the weary,

But we never sleep.

Even though it be dreary.

Just think of the things a fellow misses when he is asleep, that might not pass
if he kept awake!

Jimmie Hamatty, of Montreal, was the selected master of ceremonies at the Casino when Muldown fell down before Dwyer.

BUT Jimmie got mixed up in the Reservoir jungle and didn't reach the center of the stage until Sid Cates had told Chalorne Epps and the rest of the crowd who was going to win.

Such things will happen, and when Muldown left on the J. A. M. train, with his pocket full of specks for New York,
there was no one to regret his departure as much as us, because he promised to set 'em to lemonade after the match-in or lose.
